

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

IN submitting to our Society the following transcriptions a few words of Preface are necessary.

Every roll was independently transcribed by each of us, with the exception of C. 482. This was independently transcribed by Canon Wilson and Mr. R. Flower, B.A., of the British Museum. We had hoped for Mr. Flower's co-operation throughout, but he was unfortunately unable to continue the work.

We are but beginners; and did not hesitate to ask help in doubtful points from skilled palæographers. We wish to acknowledge this help with our warmest thanks.

Canon Capes of Hereford very kindly examined the first transcripts of C. 8, 9, 292, 293, made by Canon Wilson, and made some valuable notes and suggestions which have been embodied. He also saw C. 53 a. This and C. 292, 293, are difficult and obscure, and much in these rolls was at that time left unsettled.

Mr. C. R. Peers, architectural editor to the Victoria County History, called in the spring of 1908 at the Cathedral Library in order to examine the Sacrists' rolls; and he gave Canon Wilson substantial help in the first draft of C. 53 a.

Later in the year, when the first sheet had been printed off, Mr. Reginald Lane Poole came to see how the Chapter was dealing with the documents as a whole, and saw the rolls on which Canon Wilson was then engaged. He warmly approved of the general arrangement of the Chapter muniments; and rendered continued and invaluable assistance, as is further acknowledged, in determining the dates of the rolls, and in examining doubtful points in the originals.

Meantime Mr. Gordon was helped in the transcription of each roll by the suggestions and emendations of Mr. Rogers of the Cambridge University Library, whose interest in the work deserves our best thanks.

The indices of persons and places were compiled by Canon Wilson, the notes in square brackets being contributed by the Rev. Edmund McClure, Secretary of the S.P.C.K. The General Index and Glossary has been drawn up by Mr. Gordon, embodying some materials from a first draft by Canon Wilson. In constructing the Glossary he has derived help of a valuable kind from Archdeacon Chapman, the learned editor of the Ely rolls.

The final passing of the sheets for press was left in Canon Wilson's hands, as Mr. Gordon was then travelling in France. The obligation to pass them came very inopportunately at a time of much pressure; and the result is a longer table of errata than there ought to have been. The errors due to hurried revision are however mainly of an unimportant and obvious kind, and are not due to serious errors in transcription.

INTRODUCTION.

SOME account of the recent history of the muniments belonging to the Cathedral Church of Worcester was given in the Preface to my paper which appeared in the Transactions of this Society for 1907. To this account I need only add a few words here respecting one section of these records, the compotus rolls, of which a few transcripts form the substance of our present communication.

Mr. Reginald Lane Poole, of Oxford, in reporting on the Worcester Documents in general to the Historical Documents Commission, writes: "In other drawers and presses lie large numbers of compotus and court rolls, and similar documents. These are entirely unarranged, and it seemed unadvisable to enter upon what would necessarily be the heavy task of examining them."

It is these that form the subject of the present paper. It must not be supposed, however, that the muniments had wholly escaped the notice of the Dean and Chapter. Mr. Floyer informs me that Roger Mainwaring, who was Dean from 1633—1635, drew attention to them: and in 1750 the Chapter ordered "that a catalogue be made thereof with such abstracts indexes or references as may render the said muniments and records of most ready use to the Church." This order, however, was not carried out till 1907.

It appears from the recently made catalogue that there are about 900 rolls, of which 500 are rolls of the obedientiaries, or compotus rolls, ranging from the time of Edward I. to that of Henry VIII. A catalogue of these, prepared by Mr. Bloom and Mr. Hamilton, was printed in our Transactions for 1907. The remaining 400 rolls, chiefly accounts from bailiffs, have not been examined in detail.

In offering to our Society these transcripts of our earliest and most difficult rolls, and this brief Introduction, I must at once disavow any claim to be more than a mere tiro in such work. I had never seen a roll or handled a document till the autumn of 1906. Even with the help I have had in the transcription, as acknowledged in the title-page and preface, I have no doubt that some errors have been made in it; and I have not had the training in mediæval studies which the writer of an Introduction should possess if he is to draw out or indicate the full historical value of these documents. But I venture to hope that this Introduction will serve to shew to our members in general outline what they may expect to find in these transcripts; and that the transcripts will be of some service to historical students, and will also suggest what sort of information may be lying hid in the still unedited rolls in our collection. As a member of a Chapter in possession of these documents I have thought it my duty to the Chapter, and to this Society, to do what I can to make them known, and without further apology I throw myself on the compassion of archæologists and historians.

It is possible that documents which touch, as these do, on land-tenure in the neighbourhood of Worcester in the 13th and 14th centuries may have special value. For Worcester has in the past made important contributions to the study of this subject. Professor Maitland, in "Domesday Book and Beyond," has said that "among the charters "that have come down to us, there is no series that is longer, and "hardly a long series which is of better repute, than the line of the "land-books which belonged to the Church of Worcester."

And in the article on the Domesday Survey in Vol. I. of the Victoria County History of Worcestershire it is stated, p. 235, that "the Survey "of Worcestershire in Domesday Book presents quite special features "of interest and historical importance; and that the growth of a feudal "system has been detected on its Church lands. Some assistance," the writer adds, "for the rural economy of Domesday may be derived from "a study of the 13th-century survey of the manors belonging to the "monastery of Worcester which was printed by Archdeacon Hale (Registrum Prioratus, Camden Society)."

Now the earliest of our compotus rolls belong to the last quarter of the 13th century, and are only 30 years later than the Registrum; and thus in the hands of an expert, who knows exactly what to look for, may throw light on a few points still unsettled.

But land-tenure is not the only subject which may be elucidated by these rolls, as will be seen. They give some glimpses of the many-sided life of a monastery and its dependents, and they furnish some interesting illustrations of contemporary history.

A brief description of each roll is prefixed to its transcript, and an analysis, in the form of a modern balance sheet, is given of the account. Facsimiles are given of some of the rolls. For some reason they are distinctly easier to read in the facsimile than in the original; and of course the least faded, and most legible portions have been selected for reproduction. They scarcely convey an adequate notion of the labour spent in transcription. But a word or two may be said here about the rolls in general.

They sometimes give the receipts in one column, and the expenses of the corresponding quarter in a parallel column. This is of interest because it is noted in the Introduction to the Abingdon Rolls that they are remarkable for being in double columns, only one other case being known to the Editor. This arrangement could not be conveniently reproduced in printing; and in this transcription the receipts are printed first, and the expenses afterwards. In cases where there is a "schedule," or piece of parchment sewn to the edge of the roll, its contents are inserted in the place to which they seem to belong, with a note that they are so attached (p. 56).

As regards our principles of transcription a few remarks may be made. There seems to be no way of distinguishing certainly between c and t in all cases, and we have not uniformly adopted either, in such words as nuncius, solucio. To do so might prejudice an undecided point as to the pronunciation of such words at that time. But in some words such as actornatus, the letter c seems unmistakable, however unusual, and we have retained it. So busta and busca, totalis and locius, both appear to be justified. Some other apparent inconsistencies in spelling, such as nichil and nihil, omissions, and errors of spelling or grammar, have MS. support; but the table of errata shews that some mistakes of transcription and errors of the press escaped detection till too late. For these no one is to be blamed but myself.

In extending the abbreviated words—and the amount of the abbreviations may be seen from the facsimiles—we have been less consistent than we might have been: some words have been left as they stand for no reason: in a few cases we have been uncertain, and have therefore left them abridged; and in some cases we have fallen into error. It is probable for example that on p. 60, at the bottom, the obscure words should be interpreted De exitu j parvi cancelli, . . . De exitu grangie, and not as it stands. See pp. 68, 69, and Glossary. Some transcribers indicate extensions by the use of square brackets thus, p. 69—in cras[tinum] S[ancti] Mich[aelis] prox[ime] seq[uentis] (or seq[uens]?). but this is annoying to a reader, and not generally necessary. On p. 49 it was tempting to read Emptio panni cervisie et vinorum, but the text more accurately reproduces the original whatever it may mean.

It may help to make the accounts more intelligible to explain that each of the obedientiaries of the monastery had his own manors, and other sources of income, attached specially to the office he held; and that each was responsible for certain expenses. For example, the Camerarius had to provide clothes, boots, furs and counterpanes for the inmates of the monastery: the Pitanciarius gave certain money allowances, or pittances, to the monks and lay brothers; the Celerarius was also the Bursarius, and had to meet the incidental expenses of the monastery, as well as some that pertained to his special office (p. 32).

The revenues of these obedientiaries were derived from many sources; chiefly from manors, the names of which frequently recur: these appear to have been either let, or farmed by a bailiff, and to have paid rent partly in kind; but also from appropriate rectories, and from pensionnes or annual payments from churches. There were also other payments, which throw light on the rural economics of the time, such as Tack or Takes porcorum, for the feeding of pigs in the forest; Fisfee, apparently a tax paid to provide fish in Lent; perquisita curiæ, fines, heriots, tallagium, stallagium, avenæ consuetudinariæ, payments de feretris et tumbis, herbagium, dayeria, &c. Money also was received from the sale of stock and wool and skins, and corn and hay and dairy produce, and timber and bark, and geese and pigeons; and de crenina bidentium, which we are unable to translate. There was also the auxilium, which appears to be a payment of increasing importance (p. 11, &c.), as an equivalent in money for the labour due to the lord of the manor. In the roll of Edward II. appears an item recepta de operibus (p. 35), the meaning of which is not obvious. Hale's Introduction to the Registrum Prioratus must be read by any one who wishes to see what points there are still needing elucidation, and what light may be thrown on them by these rolls.

The receipts in these rolls are likely to be of little value for economic history because it does not seem possible to ascertain from them the gross rental received from any particular property, as this should properly include indirect and supplementary payments. It frequently occurs moreover that the same estate is charged with payments to several obedientiaries; and thus the amount paid is distributed over several rolls; and the series is far too incomplete to ascertain the total.

But the payments are given in greater detail. They will be found to furnish interesting information as to prices; and in particular the minute expense are often of great interest, throwing some light on passing events, and on the mode of life of the monastery, its visitors and its dependents. To this subject I shall return shortly.

The dates A.D. of these rolls require special examination in each case, although the name of the king and the year of his reign are stated in the roll itself. The uncertainty arises from the fact that three Edwards reigned in succession: and that Edward II. is not invariably described as Edwardus filius Edwardi; nor Edward III. as Edwardus tertius post conquestum. Each of them is occasionally described in the heading of the roll simply as Rex Edwardus. This irregularity had not been realized when the catalogue of our rolls was printed in our last year's Transactions; and we now find that some of the rolls there assigned to the reign of Edward I. belong really to the reigns of Edward II. or Edward III. Some notes are therefore prefixed to the later rolls to justify the dates assigned them. For most of these notes, as will be seen, I am indebted to Mr. R. L. Poole. Unfortunately the first sheet was printed off before I had the advantage of his assistance.

The first of the rolls here transcribed (C. 8), a Camerarius roll, may be safely assigned to the reign of Edward I., and to the year A.D. 1278-9, not only by the identification in the note on p. 3, and by the reference to the cardinal explained below (p. xii), but also by the handwriting, the small size of the roll, and by the simplicity of the account. The heads under which the receipts and expenses are classified are very few compared with those adopted in later years. The heading minute expense, which we may translate "Sundries," covers in this account such various items as the cost of counterpanes, fur capes, slippers, firewood, soap, leather, grease, tubs, payments to cardinal and pope, materials for making a shed, wages to carters and washermen (or women) and mowers, repairs to houses of workmen, hay for sheep, and Christmas boxes. This seems to point to an early stage of domestic account keeping. Possibly also the allusion on p. 2 to the computus trium annorum may indicate that the accounts of the obedientiaries had not hitherto been presented annually.

This is among the earliest surviving specimens of such rolls. The earliest roll of an obedientiary at Norwich is dated 1272; at Durham and Worcester 1278; at Westminster and Ely 1291; at Winchester 1308; at Abingdon 1322; at Holm 1440¹.

The roll (C. 9), also a Camerarius roll, was referred in the Catalogue to the reign of Edward I. (1286-7); but Mr. Poole called attention to the remarkable entry (p. 7) of a payment to the magister Grecorum at Oxford. "Not many years before 1286-7 Roger Bacon was lamenting "the total lack of Greek teaching among his contemporaries at Oxford "or Paris; and no evidence has hitherto been brought forward of any "Greek Teacher at Oxford until after the ordinance of the council "of Vienne in 1311-12. There was a papal messenger going to the "north in Feb. 1321; and Edward II. writes to Avignon commending "the services of Bertrand Bonifacii in regard to the negotiations with "Scotland (See Rymer's Foedera II. 442-450, Record Edition). The ¹ I have subsequently been informed by Mr. C. E. Woodruff, Hon. Librarian of Canterbury Cathedral, that their earliest roll is of the year 1260, and the next of 1276.

"Pope granted a tenth both in 1320 and 1321. The roll does not, so far as I can see, contain anything which proves it to be of Edward the First's reign."

This surmise is confirmed, and the matter further elucidated, by an entry in the Register of Bishop Rigaud de Asserio, of Winchester (1320—1323), a reference I owe to Canon Capes. Executio pro solucione quadrantis [de libra] concessi converso docti Oxonie linguam Hebraicam et Grecam. (Hampshire Record Society, p. 389, under the date 13 Feb. 1320-1) . . . cum nuper in Parlamento apud Westmonasterium celebrato per venerabilem patrem, &c.

Among the muniments of Westminster Abbey there is an acquittance for money collected pro expensis magistrorum in lingua ebraica, greca, arabia (sic) et caldea in universitate legencium, 28 Sep. 1325. It was printed in the Oxford Magazine, Nov. 11, 1903, and in the Athenæum a week or two later. I owe this reference to Mr. Poole.

The levy of a farthing in the pound for the teaching of Hebrew and Greek at Oxford was levied on ecclesiastical property generally through the province, and not only on conventual property.

It may also be noted that in the year 1316, Pope John XXII., as we read in the Annales de Osencia, p. 344, disciplinam triplicis [linguæ] Hebraicæ, Grecæ et Latinæ, apud generalia studia instituit.

These evidences, and in particular the nuper, are I think conclusive that C. 9 is of the reign of Edward II., not Edward I.; and that its date is therefore 1321-2 and not 1286-7.

The three next rolls, of the bursar and celerarius, C. 51, C. 51a, and C. 52, are shewn by their historical references to be unquestionably of the reign of Edward I., and therefore of the years 1291, 1293, 1294 respectively. It must be remembered in dating these rolls that Edward I. succeeded 20 Nov. 1272.

The reasons for assigning the remaining rolls, C. 482, C. 53a, and C. 292, C. 293, to the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III. are given in the remarks which are prefixed to each roll.

It is perhaps worth noting that the periods covered by these early rolls are not in all cases for a whole year, nor do they begin or end invariably on the same day. Only the first four of these nine rolls and C. 292 cover a whole year; and July 7, Sep. 8, Sept. 29, and Nov. 30 are all named as days up to which some of the accounts are made.

To turn to the contents of the rolls and some of the allusions to contemporary events.

The accounts incidentally shew how much intercourse there was between the priory of Worcester and the outside world. It was no place of seclusion from affairs. There are visits of the King to the priory, and some detail of the expenses incurred; and similar notes of other visitors, such as the Chancellor and the Justiciarius Domini Regis, the Abbots of Peterborough and Dore, the Bishop of Bangor, the Priors of Glastonbury and Malvern, the Earls of Warwick and of Lancaster, Robert Mortimer, Lady Mortimer, Edward Burnel, W. Fenton, Peter Greot and others. The expenses attending the visit of J. Blohen, the official of the newly appointed Bishop Maidstone, are given in detail on p. 37: and the visits of the Queen's Cook and Butler, and of the King's Cook, are recorded on the same page. On p. 12 an entry refers to the Episcopus de Triple. This was in the year 1291. In Bartholomew Cotton, p. 223, we read in the Chronicles for that year, "Eodem anno venit in Angliam Episcopus Tripolitanus nomine Bernardus deferens secum litteram apostolicam." This enables us to identify Triple with Tripoli.

There is constant coming and going: messengers call at the monastery on their way to and from Scotland and Ireland and Wales, London, Rome, Oxford, Cirencester, &c., and are entertained and receive a small present. The Prior has a dies amoris with the Abbot of Gloucester, p. 38, to compose their differences amicably. The Abbot of Evesham comes to spend Christmas, and requires an extra supply of eggs from Grimley. A nuncius brings a bull from the Curia Romana, and receives his honorarium; a procurator Romanus is similarly honoured. A present comes from the King, or some venison is sent by the Domina de Wenleye, and the gratuities to the messengers are duly recorded. The Bishop of Worcester is a frequent visitor, and on one occasion, when Lent is over, p. 38, he and the Prior have four days of good cheer at a cost of no less than £7 2s. 7d., which would correspond to nearly £150 to-day. We treated our Bishop well: on p. 38, he receives 12 gallons of wine, a couple of oxen, and a large number of pigs.

Presents are sent from the monastery to many important persons; a cask of wine is sent to the Queen, p. 38. A long list will be seen on pp. 38—41. Two carcases of oxen are sent on another occasion to the Bishop, p. 12, die reconciliationis ecclesie, a reference I cannot trace. It is interesting to read of the hay harvest on p. 6, and the wages paid, et in cibo et potu circa idem xd.

Then we read (p. 11) of the prior's going to London on the anniversary of the Queen's death, and to take counsel's opinion pro decima regi concessa; and of his attending the capitulum generale, the general chapter of the Benedictine Order.

There is also the very interesting notice of Thomas of Sedgebarrow and his friend Walter de Dofbruge going up to Parliament in London

(p. 23) in 1294. This is an event of importance. By referring to Stubbs' "Select Charters and other Illustrations of English History," Part vii., under the year 1294, we see that in this notice we have the record of "one of the steps in the process towards the settled constitution of "Parliament which was completed in 1295." "On the 19th of August "the king summoned the whole clergy of the realm, not in provinces "as heretofore, but to one assembly at Westminster on the 21st of "September, the chapters being represented by one, and the parochial "clergy by two proctors from each diocese." . . . facientes quod iidem decanus et archidiaconi in propriis personis suis, et dictum capitulum per unum, idemque clerus per duos procuratores idoneos . . . intersint . . . ad tractandum . . . quod providebitur in præmissis . . . Teste Rege apud Portesmuthe xix die Augusti.

Here is the origin of the representation of our Chapter in Convocation, and I note that then the chapter bore the expenses of their representative.

This was continued in the following year under the præmunientes clause. So also R. de Haukeslowe (p. 39) goes to the Parliament at York, held Sept. 9-27, 1314; and the Eleemosinarius (p. 49) represents the chapter in 1351, and John of Croule goes to "Le Mote," p. 49, and John Brevel goes on business "in partibus transmarinis," p. 39.

Below the surface therefore of the rolls we catch many glimpses of the stirring life of a monastery, and of some external events. It is perhaps the more surprising that in C. 292, of which the date is 1349-50, the only possible allusion to the Black Death is contained in the allocatio redditus, or allowance for rents not received: "Eo quod non possunt levare." The Black Death in this county was at its height in July, 1349. (Gasquet, The Black Death, p. 141, new Edition.) The phrase is repeated in the following year, pp. 56, 65.

In the same roll, p. 62, will be seen the extraordinary murrain (morina) that befell the sheep. All the rams, 8 in number, died; 275 oves matrices out of 296; 37 multones out of 537; and 300 out of 321 lambs. An entry of this kind is of great significance and interest.

There is an interesting reference, p. 68, to a "Heremitagium," which finds its explanation in later rolls which are being edited for this Society by Mr. S. G. Hamilton.

The rolls throw some contemporary light on the gifts and compulsory levies that the monastery was called on to pay. Thus in 1278, p. 2, a tax of 4*d.* in the mark is paid probably to the king: and a similar gift is levied pro cardinali. This must have been a gift to Robert Kilwardby, Archbishop of Canterbury, when he was made Cardinal Bishop of Porto, accepting this honour at the Pope's hand, to the surprise of the Chronicler, at a large sacrifice of income—ne summo Pontifici videretur inobediens, diliori sponsæ, venustioris formæ captus illecebra, valedicens temporalibus commodis non recusavit anteponeere dignitatem. (Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, p. 277.)

On p. 3 we read of the decima pape. This was the tenth imposed for six years by Gregory X. in 1274, after the Council of Lyons. It is recorded in the Annales de Wigornia, p. 465, Concessa est domino Papæ decima omnium bonorum ecclesiasticorum per totam Christianitatem in subsidium Terræ Sanctæ per sex annos continuos persolvendum. A further comment is added in the Chronicon above quoted—unde non modicum gravamen fuit universæ Christianitati et perturbatio.

There is also on p. 3 a record of the 15th paid to the king, referred to in the same Annales, p. 470—quintadecimam omnium temporalium tam clericorum quam laicorum inaudito more ad unguem taxatam rex jusserat confiscari. It seems as if a further tax also was levied of 3½d. in the mark, p. 3: and there are the primi fructus sent to the Pope as well.

It may be interesting to give one or two more illustrations of the way in which the demands of Edward I. for money, as related in the Chroniclers, are confirmed by our contemporary rolls.

It was noted above that the prior went to London in 1291 to take counsel's opinion pro decima regi concessa. The Bull of Nicholas IV. sanctioning this and the account of the collection are given in Bartholomew Cotton (pp. 183 et seqq.). The narrative ends with the words, "Et sic fuit illa taxatio durissima et medietas spiritualis soluta eo anno." The touching description given in the Annales (p. 509) may be compared with this: Sexto idus Martii, rege procurante, Papa misit quosdam qui inquirerent verum valorem nostrorum temporalium undecunque. Liberiores nobis fuerunt Egyptii sacerdotes. Gen. [xlvi. 20, 23] Joseph subjecit omnem terram Pharaoni præter terram sacerdotum. En ut cernitis et nos et terram nostram Pharaon possidet. Or the piteous complaint in the Annales de Osencia, p. 333, of the conduct of the taxatores—qui veterum taxatorum proterviam incomparabiliter excedentes multo gravius solito taxaverunt, nec sic tamen inextinguibilem regii cordis avaritiam extinguere potuerunt. Bartholomew Cotton also, p. 183, tells us that this tax was durissime gestata.

When we read, p. 12, the bare entry in the bursar's accounts, In salmone et murenis die dominica prima quadragesime pro taxatore decime ix. vid., we can supply from these extracts the bitterness of the bursar's feelings at having thus to feast the hated taxator.

But by far the greatest demand on the monastery is recorded on pp. 27, 28, as the Medietas concessa Regi hoc anno tantum. Our rolls are perhaps unique in shewing in detail what large sums were extracted both from the manors and from the obedientiaries, or such of them as were not laymen. The king demanded half of the annual revenue of every benefice to meet the crisis that had arisen—Rex Franciæ nos de terra nostra Vasconiæ malitiose decepit et inde fraudulentè eiecit. . . . How this extraordinary demand was received we may read in the Annales, p. 517. Vicesimo primo die Septembris rex habuit colloquium Londoniis cum omnibus episcopis et archidiaconibus et abbatibus; et clerus ibi similiter habuit procuratores. Ubi licet inviti omnium bonorum suorum medietatem regi publice concesserunt.

Bartholomew Cotton adds (p. 249)—quidam tamen de clero vehementer restiterunt. Quod audiens dominus rex misit milites ad locum ubi fuerant congregati procuratores pro clero qui ex parte regis dixerunt quod "quicumque fuerit inter vos qui resistat quo minime rex voluntatem suam consequatur in hac parte, dominus rex ab hac hora in antea ponit eum extra pacem suam, fidem, et protectionem . . . Quo audito nullus fuit ausus contradicere.

It was an unparalleled demand, of which our bursar on p. 31 records the payment, betraying his feelings only by special handwriting, which we have endeavoured to suggest by the use of small capitals:—SUMMA MEDIETATIS CONCESSE REGI IN EPISCOPATU WYGORNIENSI TAM TEMPORALIUM QUAM SPIRITUALIUM clli. iiiijs. jd. ob.

Perhaps I may add one descriptive paragraph from Professor Tout's History of Edward I. (p. 184):—"The Chroniclers tell us with infinite disgust how the king's officers searched the uttermost corners of the realm for money. They spared neither priest nor monk: they broke open every money chest; they ransacked the towers and belfries of the churches. . . . Edward at last demanded a half of a whole year's revenue of every beneficed Churchman. The unlucky clerks were smitten with terror; and as the king raged and stormed before the assembled Convocation, the Dean of St. Paul's dropped down dead with fright."

This is sufficient to shew how history is reflected in our rolls. Such a narrative must make Chancellors of the Exchequer of to-day heave a sigh as they read how simple and lucrative was the process of "robbing hen-roosts" in the good old days.

To the historian doubtless these rolls will furnish other points of interest, many of which I probably fail to notice. I may mention that they furnish us glimpses of the life of our monk-scholars at Oxford. It would appear from p. 21 that 10 marks (£6 13s. 4d.) was the value of a scholarship. It also seems that one of the scholars exceeded his allowance—ultra certum

—by 43s. 4½d. There is a payment, p. 14, for a scholar's commons, xxs. There is a suspicious entry, p. 20, of payment to some persons querentibus monachum Oxonia.

I have not seen it elsewhere mentioned that the monastery commemorated the deaths of King John and Bishop Blois, p. 60.

Incidentally we get glimpses of the magnificent household of the prior; his five gentlemen at arms, and three or four advocates in their robes of fur; his two grooms for his riding-horses; his three attendants de officio, and his four serving-men.

Some information as to the "esculenta et potulenta" of the priory is scattered through the accounts. Besides the staple diet of beef and mutton and pork and venison, and of bread and butter and eggs and cheese, we find mention of capones and gallinae and pulcini and volatiles and auca; and salmon and lamprey and eels and murenæ; and of pears and beans and peas; mustardum, senapium and assetum (acetum); and vinum, cerevisia, and cizera; and there is a special mention of cheese-cakes (flauns).

The frequent mention of ships and sailors reminds us that Worcester was a seaport in those days. We read, p. 50, of a ship being sunk in the Severn at Longdone, and of the steps taken to recover it, extra labour being employed to raise it and tow it to Worcester. Masts and sails and ropes are bought (pp. 13, 40); an old boat is sold (p. 18) for 46s. 8d.; and the purchase of a new ship (p. 20) at a cost of £16 10s. 4d.—nearly £300 of our money—has a paragraph to itself. This was an event of sufficient importance to be recorded in verse in the annals—

Flumen Sabrina premitur novitate carina.

It is possible that the index and glossary prepared by Mr. Gordon may give some new information as to the various officers connected with the monastery. For example among the Obedientiaries on p. 28, a Magister operum is mentioned, whose name does not, I think, occur in our later rolls. The Gardinarius or gardener appears as taking his O on p. 55, but not on p. 28. The officials mentioned on pp. 19 and 37 in particular help to give us some insight into the organisation of a monastery.

The legal expenses of a monastery are considerable. A reference to p. 39 in particular will be of interest. Very little light is thrown by these rolls on the worship of the monks. That would naturally shew itself in the rolls of the Sacrist and the Precentor. There is a single entry (p. 56) of a contribution from the pitancer pro codicibus ecclesiæ, probably a new copy of the Vulgate; and incidentally the O, or Christmas antiphon, is mentioned in payments made to the Prior, the celerarius, the subcelerarius, the Sacrist, the Precentor, and—a new point—to the Magister operum and the Gardinarius.

The student of the land system will of course turn to the same index and glossary for the various agricultural offices and industries which are represented by the terms, præpositus, ballivus, bercarius, porcarius, fugator, carucarius, carectarius, messor, tegulator, faber, carpentarius, plastrator, forestarius, prostrator buste, gardarius, deya; and the status and system indicated by such words as nativi, famuli, precarii, tentorii, operarii, ancilla—(ancilla custos aucarum is a picture in itself). He will learn something of their wages, in particular from p. 59; and on p. 58 how the labour of the famuli diminishes the cost of harvest.

He will find also in the glossary the terms used for articles employed in the building of a house: see specially pp. 12, 50, 51: and those used in the structure of carts and waggons (longæ careta), harness, &c. Some of these are obscure, and Ducange throws little light on some of our Latinized English words. We have such terms as, frenum, tractus or trahytus (traces), cluta, clavi, cloutnays, cartnays, spikynga, axes, ligatura (tires), cingula, supercingula, capistri, cartilonces, billa, colera, connected with carts and harness; and connected with ploughs we meet with vomer, skildebred, chrokes, cultura, pedales, cluppeles, and fretta, and with hercia cum havillis, a harrow with spikes. Other technical agricultural terms occur, such as meia, cancelli, cribra, riddella, tribula, clada, and kidelli, which last appear to be brushwood formed into faggots and used to construct a weir in the Severn.

There are not a few points in these pages which require elucidation by some one of greater historical and technical knowledge than either of the transcribers possesses. What are the crenina bidentium, so often mentioned, and the oves creninati? the dies divinorum, p. 48? or the payment of 4 shillings ancille coquinae pro liberatione sua de subcelerario?

But enough has been said to justify a hope that the following pages will furnish some interesting reading to the members of our Society, and perhaps to induce some historians to study our rolls which are now at length made accessible to them.

THE roll is on two skins, stitched together, 27 in. long and 9 in. wide, and is written on both sides, in double columns, the left-hand column giving the receipts, and the right-hand column the expenditure.

The following is an abstract of the accounts:—

This shows an adverse balance on the bursar's account of £150 11s. 5½d., which however is diminished by a balance from the cellarer's account of £13 12s. 2½d. to £136 19s. 3d.

ROLL OF BURSAR AND CELLARER, 21-22 EDWARD I.

(C. 51 a.) 29 SEPT., A.D. 1293-94.

THIS roll is on one skin 25 in. long, 12 in. wide, written on both sides. It is in perfect condition. It is written in double columns, the receipts of each term in the left-hand column, and the expenditure in the right. Nearly all the receipts are per talliam, and I have therefore not transcribed these words.

Between this and the previous roll there is an interval of 10 months.

ROLL OF BURSAR AND CELLARER, 22-23 EDWARD I.

(C. 52.) 29 SEPT., A.D. 1294, TO 7 JULY, A.D. 1295.

THIS roll is 35 in. long and 11 in. wide, made up of two skins stitched together. It is written on both sides, and is in good condition. The accounts are presented in parallel columns, the receipts in the left-hand column, and expenditure on the right. The accounts are divided into two parts, those of the bursar, the larger section, and those of the cellarer, with a final balance obtained from the joint accounts. The bursar's accounts give particular receipts and expenses, mostly recurrent, arranged under the three terms covered by this account; but also with general or exceptional receipts and expenses, such as the extraordinary demand of the King, made in 1294, for a moiety of all the revenue of the clergy. Subjoined is an abstract:—

ROLL OF CELERARIUS AND BURSAR,
7[-8] EDWARD II. A.D. 1313—1314 (C. 482).

THIS roll is on two skins. It is 3 ft. 9 in. long, and 12 in. wide. Some part of the top of the roll has been torn away, leaving a blank in the title, and in part of the accounts written on the back. It is generally in good condition, though in places near the margin the ink is faint. In transcription I have not inserted the 'per talliam' which occurs in almost every item. The abstract is as follows:—

BURSAR'S RECEIPTS.			BURSAR'S EXPENDITURE.
Arrears	0	12 0	Balance of debt	534	17 7½

Payments from works	4	16 4	Clerks' pensions	25	0 0
Payments for mowing	2	8 0½	Wages in monastery	2	14 0
Rents (S. John Bapt.)	23	10 8½	„ outside „	5	4 4

Other receipts, wool, &c.	77	2 4	Cash paid in manors	11	18 8
Cellarer's Receipts	19	10 0	Paid for corn	106	3 3½
Total	336	19 5½	For wood and the ship	8	16 0½
Balance	605	7 6½*	Outside expenses	151	19 11
	£942	7 0	Cellarer's expenses	13	5 9
				£942	7 0*

I submitted this roll with others to Dr. R. L. Poole, and he allows me to print the following note.

"My reasons for assigning this very interesting roll to the year beginning at Michaelmas, 1313, are as follows:—

1. There is a bishop at the beginning and end; in the middle the See is vacant. [W. Reynolds translated to Canterbury, 1 Oct., 1313; W. Maidstone consecrated 7 or 11 Oct., reached England 12 Feb., 1314. N.B. There was no vacancy in the See in 7 Edw. I., and the mention of Hugh le Despenser excludes 7 Edw. III.]

* These figures in the roll are £640 7s. 6½d. and £982 7s. 0d. respectively, a discrepancy I cannot account for.

The roll offers many points of special interest in the later items of expenditure, which appear to be exceptional.

2. The King's clerks are collecting a tenth [for the talliage on realty imposed since the end of 1312].
3. Later on a twentieth is being collected. [This was granted by Parliament in Oct., 1313. The levy usually took some time.]
4. Money is sent to Scotland to the King [during the Bannockburn campaign].
5. There is a parliament at York. [It sat there Sept. 9—27, 1314.]
6. Other names suit this date; J. Brevel (sacrist to Bishop Reynolds); J. Blohen (official of Bishop Maidstone), Hugh le Despenser."

This roll (C. 53 a) is dated anno regni regis Edwardi xxv^o, but the Edward must be Edward III., who is usually in these rolls designated tertius post conquestum. This is found to be the case with some other rolls, such as those of the Pitanciarius which follow.

The evidence for the date rests on internal evidence as pointed out to me by Mr. Poole.

In this roll, p. 49, William Beauchamp and Peter de Greot (Grete or Groete) visit the monastery, and are entertained with a feast of wine and salmon and eels. Now on 15 March, 1351 (Cal. of Pat. Rolls, Edw. III. ix. 88), half a year before this roll begins, they were associated as justices of the peace for Worcestershire: and again they appear in a similar commission, Ap. 20, 26 Edward III., 1352, (ibid, p. 284).

Richard Talbot (p. 48), John Haklute (p. 49), and Henry Botiler belong to the same period: the first two were associated as having both married heiresses of the Pembroke property; and the mother of Richard Talbot was a Botiler.

Thomas Foliot (p. 49) witnessed a deed at Worcester on Tuesday before Whitsunday, 1352. (Cal. of Close Rolls, Edw. III. ix. 495.)

Magister William de Fenton (p. 49) is also an important person in 1349.

On these grounds the roll has been dated as of the reign of Edward III.

ROLL OF PITANCIARIUS, 23-24 EDWARD III. (C. 292.)

FROM 30 SEPT., A.D. 1349 TO 29 SEPT., A.D. 1350.

THIS roll is on two skins 32 in. long, 9 in. wide, and has a skin sewn to the side of the same width, and 6 in. long, headed Decime reddit.

This roll is dated anno regni regis Edwardi xxii^o, but the Edward must be Edward III., not Edward I. For the following roll, C. 293, dated 25-26 Edwardi, is also a roll of Nicholas de Clanfelde, and in that roll he mentions Roger de Minstreworth and Henry de Lawerne. Now the former of these was Eleemosinarius in 1355-6; and the latter Precentor from 1358—1361. Moreover, Nicholas de Clanfelde was Coquinarius in 1346-7. These details rest on the evidence of other rolls, as may be seen from the Catalogue printed in the last volume of Transactions of this Society. This evidence is confirmed by Mr. Poole's judgment on the handwriting.

It may be abstracted as follows :—

NOTE.—The items under the first two heads of Expenditure amount to £13 10s. 0d. and £40 7s. 2½d. But they are not added up, nor do they appear in the total at the foot.

On the back of this roll is an account of the corn received and used as seed, and a very interesting inventory of the stock of horses, cattle, and sheep. There is a similar account in C. 293.

The MS. is in good condition, but in places the writing is very faint.

ROLL OF PITANCIARIUS, 25-26 EDWARD III. (C. 293).

FROM 6 NOV., A.D. 1351, TO 30 SEPT., A.D. 1352.

THIS roll is on two skins, together 3 ft. 7 in. long, and 9 in. wide, written on both sides. A small portion of the margin has been bitten away by mice in several places. The part of the back of the roll which was exposed to the air has become nearly obliterated; but the rest of the roll is in good condition, though the readings are often difficult.

INDEX OF PLACES.

NOTE.—The names of certain manors and places occur so frequently in the rolls of the Camerarius, the Celerarius, and the Pitancarius respectively, that it is sufficient reference, in general, for them to add Cam., Cel. or Pit.

Where places are only mentioned as describing some person, as Symon de Croule, they will be found in the index of names, as Croule, Symon de.

The notes on place-names in square brackets have been very kindly added by the Rev. Edmund McClure, who has made a special study of this subject for Worcestershire.

The ref. to Reg. is to the Registrum Prioratus, Camden Society.

A

- Abbedel'*, 52
Allestone, 28. Now Alston, close to Teddington near Tewkesbury. Reg. 78 a. [This in 909 was Ælfigestun. B.M. Charters and Rolls, see Cart. Sax. iii. 523 (an original Charter in B.M.), where it is leased by Bp. of Worcester]
Alvestone. Cel. A manor given by Wolstan, surrendered to Henry VIII. Reg. 80 b, near Stratford-on-Avon [now Aulston on the Avon]

B

- Barnesley*, 44. Attached to Bibury in Gloucestershire. [This is the Bærendes lea associated with Bæganbyrig (Bibury) in the possessions of Worcester (Cart. Sax. iii. 657). The places are near each other in Gloucestershire. The Editors of the B. Museum Charters and Rolls give a Worcester Barnsley (granted to Pershore in 972) under its early name of Beornoths leah (for Beorthnothes-leah.)]
Bartone, 51
Batenhall, 53
Berbourne, 47. See Beverbourne
Berwe, 14. Probably Bereg of the Registrum, close to Overbury, N.E. of Tewkesbury. [This takes now the form Berrow. The original was beorg or berg = a hill]
Berford, 34, 35, 39. In the hundred of Pershore, identified in the Worcestershire County History with Beaford (or Bestford). [Beaford in 972 was Bettesford (see orig.

Bergh, 48, 52. Probably the same as Berewe or Bereg above

Blacwell, 18, 27. Now Blackwell, in Tredington on Stour. [Blacwelle is in King Edgar's grant to Worcester (12th cent. copy in Cart. Sax. iii. 379), and is there said to be near the bank of Stour, on which is Sceapwæstun (Sheep-wash-town) or Shipston on Stour]
Blockel', 19. Blockley. It is Blockelei in Domesday. [This is Bloccanlea in Cart. Sax. iii. 657]
Borastone, 26, 28, 30. A mile N.E. of Tenbury
Bradewass. Cam. Cel. Now Broadwas. Bradewesham in Domesday. Reg. 31 b. [Bradeuuesse in the charter ascribed to 779 in Cart. Sax. i. 325]
Bromesgrave. Cel. Pit. Now Bromsgrove
Brudone, 22. Bredon. [In charters ascribed to 8th century (Cart. Sax. i. 324, &c.), it is Breodun "in cujus cacumine urbs est antiquo nomine Baenintesburg," now Banbury Stone?]

Cronnes (?), 51
Cropphorne. Cam. Cel. Crophorn near Evesham
Crowle. Cel. Near Worcester. Croblea in Domesday [also Croc-leah and Crog-leah = ? Saffron Wood. Cod. Dip. 237, 242]

D

- Dene. Foresta de*, 53
Doddenham, 56. [Dodhæmapull Cod. Dip. 154, according to Kemble is now Doddenham pool]

Dudley, 57. Dudley. In Domesday, Dudelei
Dumbelstone, 12, 61. In Gloucestershire. In the charters it is Dumolton

E

- Eboracum*, 34, 39. York
Esbur. Also Esbury, Eresbyrie, now Eastbury in Hallow

Evesham, 39. On the Avon
Eymore, 49, 50. Now Eymore Wood, near Upper Areley. [? Egsanmore, Cod. Dip., 57a. But this would become naturally Exmore]

F

- Fackenham*, 38, 41. Near Redditch. Feckeham in Domesday.
Fepstone. Cel. Now Fepton or Phepston in Himbleton. Reg. 57a. (Fepsinton, Fepsitanatum.) [In a grant to the monastery of Worcester ascribed to 956 it is given as Fepsetnatun. Setena is a genitive plural from sæta = inhabitants; the whole meaning the turn or enclosure of the inhabitants of a district called Fep. cf. mos setena and Beonet-setena—near Grimley—in Cart. Sax. iii. 386]
Folia, 35.

H

- Hallawe. Cel. Pit.* Now Hallow, near Worcester. [In the grant of Hallow to the Bishop of Worcester (Cart. Sax. i. 494) it is called Halhegan; and in the boundaries Hal haga, which would indicate that the place was a haga or game enclosure]
Hefynton, Herferton. Cam. Cel. Now Harvington on the Avon above Evesham. [Herefordtun, Cart. Sax. iii. 379, see also i. 184. cf. Hereferthesmadua, one of the bounds of lands near Pershore]
Herdeuyk. Cel. Reg. 37b. Part of Grimley, part of Edgar's Grant. [The name means cattle-shed. A Saxon Heord = herd and Wic = dwelling, &c. cf. Shapwick]
Herlebury, 1, 5, 14. Hartlebury. The Church belongs to the Bishop, and pays one mark to the Camerarius, and one mark preceptori S. Wistani [Heortlebyrig Cod. Dip. 627, &c.]
Holte, 1e, 20. Now Holt, on the Severn above Worcester. [La Holt = the Wood] Honewardel, 54, 58. [Is this a mistake for Dovewardel? If so it is Doverdale. The Domesday scribe has Lunvredele. According to the 12th century copy of the Charter (Cart. Sax. i. 172), Doverdale, which goes into Salwarpe, is one of the boundaries of Ombersley given to the Bishop of Worcester in 706. There was in 1229 (Cal. of Chart. Rolls, i. 102) a Howardswell between Droitwich and Rushock]

Humeltone. Cel. Now Himbleton near Droitwich. The Capellanus pays direct to the monk-Scholar at Oxford. [Granted to the Bishop of Worcester in 816. Cart. Sax. i. 495]

Knythwyke, 41. Knightwick-on the Teme. [Cnihta-wic, Cod. Dip. 514]
Kynfare, 38. Now Kinver, near Wolverley. Chenefare in Domesday. [Kinver seems to preserve the name of the Cynibre forest, mentioned along with Moerheb (now Morf) Forest, in the original Charter of 736 (now in British Museum) given to the monastery of Husermere. In the Testa de Nevill (13th cent.) the forms are Kinefar and Morf.]

L

Lawerne, Temple, 65. Between Broadheath and Martley. Reg. 36 a. Laure in Domesday. [Lawerne River is a boundary of Grants to see of Worcester (Cod. Dip. 125, &c.), Laure and Lauric are bounds of Hallow. Cart. Sax. i. 496]
Lippard, 20, 28. Now Leopard's Grange E. of Worcester. Also Leppart, Lypart. In Domesday Lappewrte. Vict. County Hist. i. 296 a. [The Lappewrte in Domesday was in Oswaldslow Hundred, which probably took in part of Warwick, and is thus Lapworth, Warwick. It is the Hlappawurthin, Cart. Sax. i. 495. The Lippard of the text is probably the Lipperd mentioned in the boundaries of land near Worcester, leased by Bp. of Worcester in 969 (Cart. Sax. iii. 531), and has thus nothing to do with the Domesday Lappewrte]
Lockeslye, 1, 5. Part of Stoke

Lovel, 34, 36. Part of Mora, near Lindridge
Lowe, Le, 20. Perhaps at Lindridge. But the name occurs elsewhere
Lyndrugge, 41, 52. Lindridge, in Diocese of Hereford. [See Grant of Newenham in Lindridge to Worcester (Cart. Sax. iii. 209 and Cod. Dip. 570)]

M

Madresfeld, 22. (Medelefeld) Vict. County Hist. i. 328
Malvernua, 13, 18, 28, 36. Malferna in Domesday

 Palefridus, 6, 14, 19, 61. A palfrey. The word has a curious history, veredus is late Latin for a post-horse; said to be derived from veho and rheda, a Teutonic word for a vehicle. Paraveredus is therefore an extra post-horse. the Latin, and re from Teutonic

 Pensiones, 5, 12, 18, 27, 36. It will be seen from Hale's Introduction that the origin of these pensions, or annual payments to the Convent, is obscure. It seems as if a donor could surrender the advowson to a Cathedral, on condition of its paying a 'pension' annually to the monastery. Churches in the patronage of the priory demanded some annual payment as a recognition. A list of the livings in the patronage of the Priory is given in the Reg. 132a, and on institution the rectors faciunt fidelitatem; et quod fideliter solvent pensiones. Of the four mentioned in C. 8 as paying pensions, two, St. Andrew and Stoke, were in the patronage of the priory; and two, Herlebury and Lockeslye, are not.
